Marle Place Garden, Brenchley, Kent

Marle Place Garden - An enchanting ten acre garden of tree lined avenues and an abundance of shrub roses. Hedged rooms house perennial annuals and unusual shrubs giving scent and colour throughout. A yew hedged well stocked kitchen garden, orchid house and art exhibition help to create a surprise at every corner of this magical garden

Marle Place house is set within privately-owned, peaceful gardens, first created in 1890 and surrounded by woodland and orchards. Over the last 100 years, the gardens have evolved to include a series of enclosed terraced gardens, tree-lined avenues, rills and ornamental ponds. In spring, there is an abundance of blossom and bulbs which are later replaced in summer by scented, old-fashioned roses and exuberant borders

In autumn the trees provide a dazzling display of colour. Historical features of the garden also include a Victorian gazebo, an Edwardian rockery and an Italianate walled garden. The Victorian greenhouse has now been restored and houses a splendid orchid collection.
