A visit to Miserden Garden, Gloucestershire GL66 7JA and Painswick Rococo Garden, Gloucestershire GL6 6TH

Miserden is a historic walled garden, established in the 17th century, overlooking a deer park and the Cotswold hills. Notable features include a topiary yew walk, distinctive grass steps by Sir Edwin Lutyens, and the Miserden Park house (built in 1620), which is not open to visitors but creates a scenic backdrop, especially when covered in spring wisteria. The garden's long mixed borders display roses, clematis, shrubs, and herbaceous plants for year-round colour. Highlights include a 200-year-old sycamore set into a stone wall, an ancient mulberry planted in 1620, a rill with a fountain, a stone summerhouse, and a spiral of dahlias.

Painswick Rococo Garden, the only fully intact Rococo garden in England, was designed in the 1740s by Benjamin Hyett as a theatrical retreat behind Painswick House. Set in a Cotswold valley, it includes playful buildings, winding paths, pools, follies, a kitchen garden, and woodland walks for relaxed exploration. Restored in the 1980s, it now showcases Georgian garden style—ornate, romantic, and distinctive.
